FOR RELEASE Saturday afternoon or
Sunday morning, August 24 or 25, 1935.

Mr. Edward M.M. Warburg, a trustee of the Museum of Modern Art, will be the guest speaker on the Woman's Radio Review Thursday, August 29, at four p.m., over Station WEAJ and network (NBC). His subject will be: Why a Museum of Modern Art Has a Film Department.

Mr. Warburg, a collector of modern painting and sculpture and a lecturer on modern art, early realized that the motion picture, as the most modern of the arts, has a definite place in an art museum. He was chairman of the original motion picture committee of the Museum and is now an officer of the Museum's recently established Film Library.

The Film Library is engaged in making as complete a collection as possible of noteworthy motion pictures produced in this country and abroad from the year 1889, when the first movie was made, to the present day. Programs of these films will soon be circulated non-commercially to museums and colleges throughout the country.
