SPRING CLASSES BEGIN FEBRUARY 2ND AT THE ART CENTER OF THE MUSEUM OF MODERN ART

Registration for spring art classes for adults at The Art Center of The Museum of Modern Art, 4 West 54th Street, is now underway. Classes meet once a week for a 15-week session and are limited in size.

Openings are still available in evening classes for beginners and advanced students in painting - oil and other media - drawing, life studies, print making, ceramic sculpture, and pottery. Afternoon orientation classes for beginners, designed to introduce the student to various media, are available. Beginning and advanced students can register for painting and life classes.

Each of the beginner courses is an introduction to technique in order to develop personal expression. Tuition fees range from $75 to $100 per 15-week session.

The Art Center, under the direction of Victor D'Amico, is devoted to creative art education for children, young people, and adults. The school contains equipment especially designed to meet the needs of both the child and the adult - the result of years of experimentation. Studios accommodate classes in sculpture, ceramics, and metal work, as well as drawing, painting, and collage.

The Art Center instructors are selected for their ability, preparation, and skill in meeting the needs of a particular age level or in teaching a special craft.
