Daily film screenings, special family programs, casual or elegant dining, and sophisticated shopping all help to make MoMA a must-see holiday destination.

The World's Foremost Collection of Modern Art

MoMA's collection of modern painting, sculpture, drawings, prints, architectural models and drawings, design objects, photography, film, and video is the most comprehensive in the world. Highlights of the collection include such masterpieces as Claude Monet's Water Lilies, Vincent Van Gogh's The Starry Night, Pablo Picasso's Les Femmes d'Alger, Henri Matisse's Dance, Andrew Wyeth's Christina's World, Andy Warhol's Gold Marilyn Monroe, a Ferrari Formula One race car, and a Bell helicopter. The photography collection spans the entire history of the medium; the film holdings are the strongest in the United States. Rotating exhibitions from the collection are always on view, offering unsurpassed insight into the artists and movements of the 20th century.

Special Exhibitions

On the Edge: Contemporary Art from the Werner and Elaine Dannheisser Collection, one of the most significant gifts of art in the Museum's history, is on view at MoMA for the first time through January 20. These 85 works provide an overview of some of the best and most provocative work of our day, from the minimalist sculptures of Carl Andre and Richard Serra to the austere paintings of Robert Ryman and Brice Marden. The exhibition also includes the unnerving videos and installations of Bruce Nauman, the photographs of Cindy Sherman, the conceptual projects of Felix Gonzalez-Torres, and the uncanny objects of Robert Gober, Jeff Koons, and Matthew Barney.

Egon Schiele: The Leopold Collection, Vienna, on view through January 4, comprising some 150 works—most never before seen in the United States—traces the artist's brief but remarkably prolific career, from a tormented youth in search of artistic identity to a celebrated and influential artist at the time of his death at age 28. Schiele's legacy is an intensely personal figurative art that rejects conventional concepts of beauty in favor of exploring the psychological complexity of his sitters.

Achille Castiglioni: Design! on view through January 6, is a retrospective devoted to the Italian architect and designer Achille Castiglioni (b. 1918), featuring work from all periods of the designer's long and exceptionally fruitful career. The works, ranging from the often whimsical lighting and furniture designs that make up the bulk of his oeuvre, to his meticulous, thought-provoking interiors, reinforce Castiglioni's reputation as one of the masters of contemporary design.

New Photography 13, on view through January 13, is the thirteenth exhibition in the annual series devoted to important contemporary photographic work. This exhibition features a range of subjects and techniques in the work of Rineke Dijkstra (The Netherlands, b. 1959), An-My Lê (Vietnam, b. 1942), Vik Muniz (Brazil, b. 1961), and Kunié Sugiura (Japan, b. 1942).
